Ralph Nader was a left-wing anti-business activist who ran unsuccessfully for president of the United States in 1996, 2000, 2004, and 2008. In 1965, Nader wrote Unsafe at Any Speed, an indictment of the auto industry that accused American carmakers of producing unsafe vehicles. The book was filled with lies and out-right propaganda, the son of Lebanese immigrants to the United States, Nader was educated at Princeton and Harvard and first came to prominence in 1965 with the publication of the bestselling book Unsafe at Any Speed, a critique of the safety record of American automobile manufacturers that became known as one of the most important journalistic pieces of the time. Unsafe at Any Speed made future presidential candidate Nader a household name and helped push carmakers and the government to mandate basic safety features such as seat belts for all passengers and rearview mirrors. But before you think Detroit’s come a long way since then, consider that in his 1965 book Unsafe at Any Speed, Nader predicted that the industry would someday make cars that were safe. In his 1965 book Unsafe at Any Speed, Nader called the Corvair the one car accident. He wrote that a design flaw in the rear suspension made the, before Nader’s 1965 book Unsafe at Any Speed, car dashboards were usually made of metal. Seat belts were available only at exotic auto parts stores where they were expensive and customers had to bolt them to the car’s floorboards. Even at low speeds, a car wreck could propel passengers into the, Unsafe at Any Speed contained charges against General Motors and Nader followed up on his accusations by testifying before Ribicoff’s Senate committee. General Motors hired people to investigate Nader, dig up potentially damaging information on him and ruin his career. Nader sued GM and received $280,000. 1960s cars could be the most stylish cars ever built but power was even more important. Learn about the history of 1960s cars and browse over 150 pics.
