Muslim-Christian relations in Ghana: A model for world dialogue and peace. The abstract states that the relations between Christians and Muslims have been a shaky one for centuries. Islam, the majority of Nigeria’s approximately 70 million Christians are either Roman Catholic at least 18.9 million or Anglican 18 million but a diverse group of Protestant churches also claim significant members including Baptists. The Nigerian Baptist Convention claims 6 million worshipping members. Presbyterians, Assemblies of God, Methodists, the Evangelical Reformed Church, this paper examines the way in which within an African religious and spiritual context athletes and in particular footballers of Ghana employ religious functionaries and religious means from a variety of traditions in an attempt to achieve sporting success. Specific examples and case studies illustrate and contextualize this search. This study aimed in general to determine and describe the religious education in a democratic school culture and the potential strategies in disseminating religious de-radicalization in schools, published in Ilorin Journal of Religious Studies IJOURS vol 1 no 1 June 2011 pp 21-32. In Ghana, however, Christians and Muslims have lived in absolute peace since the introduction of Christianity and Islam in the fifteenth century. This paper explores Christian-Muslim relations in Ghana and specifically examines why Muslims and Christians have lived in peace for centuries. The paper concludes that it is the democratic school culture that is one of the potential strategies in disseminating religious de-radicalization in schools.
