June 10th, 2019 - The coffee has to be ground for espresso very fine. It's worth experimenting with various brands of coffee. I'd avoid Starbucks. Also, the cafe creme in France has a relatively small amount of milk as you know by the size of the typical cup in which it's served. You'll get much more of the full flavor of the coffee by reducing the ratio of milk to coffee.

CoffeeGeek Coffee General Discussion What is a café crème
June 3rd, 2019 - Cafe creme doesn't have cream in it. Rather, it is an espresso style coffee but pulled very long in about the same 25 seconds or so as a classic Italian espresso. Some people run it a bit longer. It is ground coarser to achieve this. Drink size varies but about 200ml is about what you would expect.
